What is MEET?

«Media Education for Equity and Tolerance» (2016-2018) is a project co-funded by the European Commission. It aims at promoting a critical and intercultural understanding as well as an aware use of media among young citizens in multicultural public schools and democratic societies. Through action research, MEET will give teachers and educators methods to make existing media education practices more inclusive for intercultural classroom work.

What are our goals?

- Increase young people's intercultural awareness through critical media analysis and production
- Provide better media literacy practices to prevent discrimination and promote intercultural dialogue, civic competences and critical understanding of the media
- Support young people's civic engagement
- Improve school's climate by fostering young people participation and deconstructing stereotypes of different social groups
- Advise policy makers on how to implement media education policies to promote equity, tolerance and human rights

Tolerance and Equity are key values of our democratic societies. However hate speech, discrimination and racist discourse are on the rise online and offline. Like others, young people globally are confronted with media representations often lacking in respect and diversity.

In this context,
